

The Guiding Lights of Lake Michigan

*Above: Big Sable Point Lighthouse, Below: North Breakwater Light, At Right: Little Sable Point Lighthouse, Far Right: Pentwater North
Pierhead Light. Photos by Todd and Brad Reed*

We're so proud of our area lighthouses...these familiar structures that link our past to our present.

In the 19th century, the lights were the focal point that guided ships safely into the harbor. Today, these lighthouses proudly stand watch over Lake Michigan waters, opening their doors to hundreds of visitors year after year, thanks to the Sable Points Lighthouse Keepers Association, a group dedicated to their preservation.